INITIAL WALKING TRAILS

The child as a being that develops is considerably able to see the child with his interpretation of people, things, animals, plants, and everything about the world. Your perception is intensified when the adult intentionality is guided to realize this potential and to instill positive that childhood is not simplified by chance and / or undeserved by retrograde concepts of devaluation of children's thinking.

Thus, we agree with Smolka & Goes (1995) in the direction of the teacher need to become a guide, able to encourage children to navigate the knowledge to make their own discoveries and develop their ability to observe, think, communicate, and create in this sense the sign language-body comes as a major incentive for this process of growth of the child.

It is necessary to conceive a child through his body, develops his educational process because it is stored characteristics of life, which cries out to be concrete, meeting the needs of its reality and vice versa. This question in turn should promote the educational work of the kindergarten teacher beyond the simple task of motor action, bringing their practice to an educational activity.

So the movements give the child freedom to live your world with more pleasure enhancing their ability to travel and explore the world around them, giving them more knowledge of your body and developing his intelligence. The more movement and exploration of the world, more children have their cognitive, affective and social and motor skills to a high level of quality that brings best for babies and young children lived in actions security.

Based on the concept that the child can and should be perceived and valued in its broadest sense, we developed the project : "Playing and learning holidays: a stroll through the streets of Bethlehem", placing the institution of early childhood education integrated the unique needs of childhood. Therefore, based on the principle of comprehensive education is meant as relevant contact, more intense, these children with their cultural heritage, or places they can visit while having leisure and knowledge about the history of your city, and the culture in general, the experience earned him a citizen.

The child is born with an extraordinary capacity for socialization, learning in social interaction with more experienced peers to help in the processes of learning and development. On the play, its essential language of communication with the world, starts his movements, from simple to more complex that allow the child the knowledge of himself and the world, invites us Debortoli (2002,p.86).

The play is human expression, is a language is a process by which we humans, collectively mean the world. Meaning that can be shared, dialogued, disagreed, rebuilt, overhauled. Meanings that can be manifested by our multiple forms of expression, our voice and our words, the increased sense we can achieve. Language, speech, voice becomes human experience, which becomes the body.

For this reason we provide children an enriched and dynamic design of learning situations that favor its full development, the interactions that allow the various languages childhood experiences.

To this end, the learning situations for children were organized from the language of culture as a driver of educational work, and musical languages, visual and plastic and emerging learning, present in the dimension of art and culture, told in the course below.

MEETING WITH LANGUAGES - THE METHODOLOGICAL

We start with the assertion by Brougère (2002) posits that children do not grow crops in the symbolic universe of unique childhood, this universe is not closed - on the contrary, is more than any other, very vulnerable, such relationships are formed in the context of interactions social. Thus culture plays an important role in the child's life when viewed as a social, historical and cultural. However, the child is not merely the result of their socio-cultural context, but the author of his own story, she is a competent and be actively producing culture, interact with games that portray the characteristics of its people, its place in which requires addition of cultural contact, scaled by other movements other ways of knowing the world.

Thus the child also produces a play culture in social and historical context in which knowledge, learn, create and recreate their way of playing, the culture within which they live. It is understood, therefore, that culture is playful emergency room and enrichment produced in social interaction and assumes that interpretations of the meanings given to objects in this interaction (by Brougère, 2002).

The musical language is one among many other possibilities of knowledge production childhood, which was present in a way of listening pleasure, leisure, relaxation and culture in or out of drive space. For this assertion there because we believe that art can be counted on the habits and characteristics of a people of a region and / or a nation. It is also a language that makes reference to a context of cultural experiences brincantes, which seek to remember and learn from games and rhymes as present in the oral expression of children.

From this principle we developed our pedagogical actions for and with children, guided in languages such as sources of learning and development. They are also possibilities for knowledge and reading of the child's world, the culture of the place, as well as the perception expressed by the child lived, and providing opportunities to live with them their city, and learning it to "grow" and say to know it to others, with autonomy and feel part of the medium in which it operates.

Our tour included methodological trajectory to some sights and cultural city of Bethlehem, where we experienced in walking pleasure, look for some new discovery and other looks of wonder and strangeness associated with learning, leisure and play.

The methodology organized through language and cultural languages driving emerging musical, bodily-gestural-visual and plastic, were in the process of challenging learning situations that included tours, questions and perspectives for expanding children's knowledge

The cultural language was contemplated, by visiting a few landmarks in the city of Bethlehem: House of Eleven Windows, Mercado Ver-o-Peso, Corvette Navy and the Sé Cathedral From the contact of children with such elements, tour learned, children and teachers about the importance of each, its history and architecture, in a language easily accessible for children to understand the historical significance of each. Knowing the market in Ver-o-Peso a variety of fruits and foods of our region as well as the architecture of the mansions of the historic center and its Portuguese tiles.

We organize workshops of dance and music within the unit, valuing Carimbó, Para dance, telling about their appearance, their characteristics and clothing. We tunes of wheels, watching their characters and their rhythms, learning to play and culturally rich during the holidays.

The musical language was crafted by the music, through songs of the stamp and the wheels of our region, where we offer interactive spaces decorated and inviting, where they played several songs and dances, among them the following: "The dance of stamping, stamp Monkey , girl tacacá, Xenga, Xenga Pará, timestamp hummingbirds, dancing girl, beans on the stove, Juliana stamped On the grass, woven by the wheels: imagination, Juvenile A beautiful Rose, I have a doll like that, I lost my ring at sea."

Sign language-body connectivity was literally a musical language, which encourage children to make their movements, gestures, expressions and movement, through the dances and songs Carimbó wheel in a spacious and organized so that they feel free to express themselves and realize their movements.

Plastic-Visual Language, developed in the interactive space, workshops called, was by the display of drawings relating to environmental education related to the songs and musical wheel. From these views invite children to cook from scraps and plastic bottles, cartoon characters and songs, sharpening your imagination, fantasy and creativity, through creating and recreating in junk shops. The children made drawings and illustrations to recount from the tours to the sights and the Model Farm, culminating in the painting and illustration of a ceramic tile alluding to uncover during the visitation of the houses in the historic center of Bethlehem

The development of this project in several languages during the summer camp this fall of 2011, was notable both for children and teachers providing opportunities for them a vast knowledge about the local culture and a new look at the history of life for all.

OUR MEMORIES AND LEARNING

Recalling our learnings, we consider the importance of children having to learn the premise of first-order the game together with other languages. With freedom to be a producer of his own knowledge, respecting the time and experience of each one in particular and characteristic of each child.

In this dimension our responsibility as educators is expanding in the face of a challenging new context of learning, established via a circuit of several languages, involving collective responsibilities of the educational institution, community and family.

On the tour to market the Ver-o-Peso, the children had the opportunity to experience various cultural events, learn about the daily life of the place. Were encouraged to learn or re-translate into their language, culture Pará, including in his repertoire, knowledge about the culture of his people, strengthening their identity and bringing children to their family context, explored experiences in places that surround it, forming relationships with others and with the environment.

Regarding sign language, body, arising from the musical language suggest broad movements, in order to involve different expressions of the children is the music slower or busy with different rhythms chosen for and with children, understanding that they also choose cultural repertoires, but who need access to musical diversity.

Actions developed with culture and movements have brought opportunities for developments in the physical aspects of each child, creating new relationships with your body, revealing new stage of learning and valuing the rights of the various languages and childhoods, strengthening human values, solidarity, respect offering to life the myriad of rich and meaningful experiences through educational performances, directed the peculiarity of the child.
